

DPAC Newsletter

Volume 1:2

January 2026

Conference and Black History Celebrations

What is new at DPAC? We should we look forward to this year?
We would like to announce the following.

DPAC Conference- February 27, 2026 -March 1, 2026

DPAC announces an upcoming conference to be held in Greenville North Carolina at East Carolina University. This 3-days conference will feature conversations about the history and experience of people of African descent alongside exhibition of Black cultural experience. Music food, story telling and talks by experts in African history will generate discussions and a great experience of this event. The event will feature both in person, hybrid and virtual presentations. If you want to participate, sign up by January 30, 2026 at <https://bit.ly/dpacfc> You can also scan the QR Code for convenience on your mobile We look forward to having you.

[insert here flyer]

Journal of Diaspora Pan African Center

During this year, DPAC will be soliciting call for articles on Pan Africanism from various perspectives. We are currently assembling an editorial board of experts on the subject.

We invite those interested in serving on the board to apply by emailing your CV to us at dpacdmn@gmail.com. Indicate on your letter head "Editorial Board Application."

If you are interested in contributing your article to the Journal of Diaspora Pan African Center, send us your abstract with the letter head – "Contribution to the Journal."

Articles will be published on our website after peer reviews process if completed. We look forward to receiving your applications and contributions.

Since pan Africanism is an interdisciplinary intellectual ideology and theoretical framework that informs a variety for academic discipline, articles in the Journal of Diaspora Pan African Center will reflect the interdisciplinary nature of this ideology. Subthemes to be covered as already listed on our website include the following:

We look forward to receiving your entries and sharing ideas on how pan Africanism informs your various academic fields.

Final Thoughts

Pan-Africanism invites us to reimagine what's possible when Black people everywhere unite in purpose, in pride, and in power.

So, whether you are reading this in Nairobi, New York, or anywhere in between—know that this movement includes you. Let us keep the conversation going.

Join our Diaspora Pan African Center to motivate and encourage many to band together for self-determination, for pride in African culture, food, music, fashion, knowledge and much more that Africa offers.

Register here for membership or donate to support our efforts in educating the younger generation about the experience of people of African descent in the diaspora and on the continent of Africa.

<https://diasporapanafricancenter.org/>

Stay well, stay safe, Think Pan Africanism, Hail Ubuntu!
Until Next time.....

By Mary Nyangweso, PhD

dpacdmn@gmail.com

DPAC